SENSITIVITY: A WIDESPREAD AND GROWING CONCERN

The skin's delicate interface between the internal and external worlds makes it particularly susceptible to both internal and external stressors. Approximately 50% of the population claims to have characteristics of sensitive skin and while this number varies, it appears to be growing worldwide.

Sensitive skin is a syndrome in which a person experiences unpleasant sensations (stinging, burning, redness, pain, itching, and tingling sensations) in response to things that do not normally provoke such sensations such as wind, cosmetics and skin treatments, low humidity and even water. However, stress, over-exfoliation, incorrect product usage and urban pollution can sensitize even healthy skins.

Usually sensitive or inflamed skin is easily recognized as it typically appears red and warm to the touch, however often these sensations are felt without any visible signs of redness or irritation, so it is key to carefully assess the level of skin sensitivity before performing any treatment and to ask the client how they feel during all steps of the treatment to avoid over-sensitizing the skin.

IMPAIRED BARRIER FUNCTION

Sensitive skin is associated with an impaired barrier function. This can lead to a vicious cycle in which the impaired barrier makes the skin more susceptible to the penetration of irritants and allergens, thus triggering an inflammatory condition. Emotional stress has also been shown to diminish barrier recovery, delaying skin's healing during times of stress. During periods of sudden or chronic sensitivity, the epidermal barrier must be protected and reinforced to avoid excessive transepidermal water loss (TEWL) or penetration of irritants and pathogens that cause inflammation.

NEUROGENIC INFLAMMATION

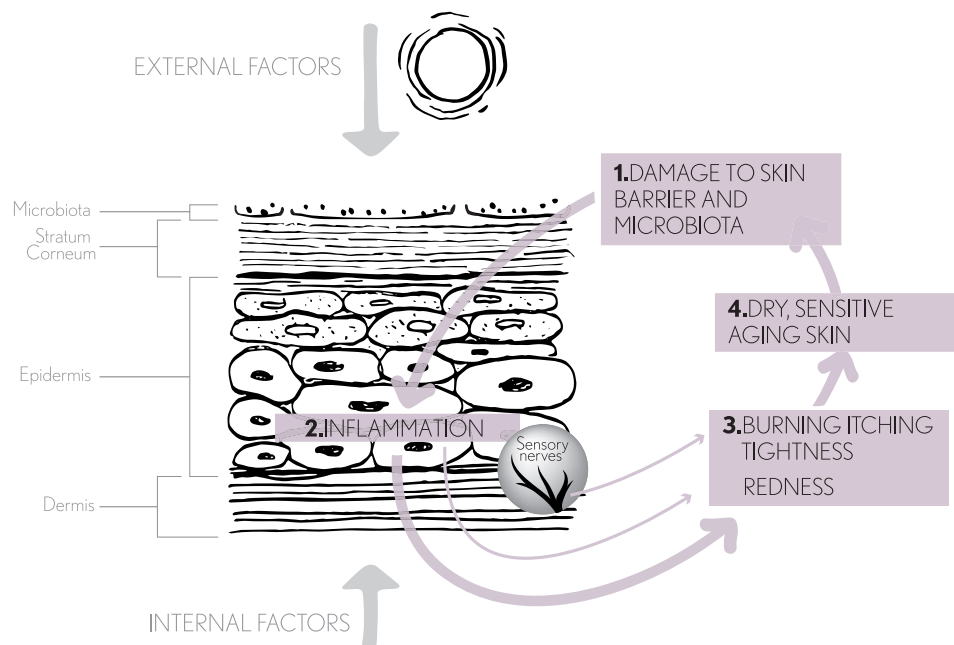

Besides irritation caused by external factors, inflammation can also be triggered by internal factors. Scientific data suggests that hypersensitive reaction is closely related to the function of nerve fibers in the epidermis. Due to the multitude of nerves in the skin, external stimuli such as UV, pH alterations and changes in temperature are perceived more intensely and with a consequential increase in skin reactivity. In the same way, the emotional state can stimulate the peripheral nerves and release chemical mediators which induce inflammation with consequent redness, itching and heightened sensitivity. This type of inflammation is defined as neurogenic.

MICROBIOTA: A SHARED ENVIRONMENT

While we may think of our barrier as uniquely ours, it is in fact a shared environment. Our skin is home to a diverse ecosystem, including various microorganisms. About 1 million bacteria per square centimeter reside on the skin's surface. This community of microorganisms which lives inside and at the surface of our bodies is called microbiota. The skin's microbiota plays an essential role in our adaptive immunity, meaning that maintaining a beneficial bacterial balance will help protect our skin from harmful bacteria that trigger inflammation. Probiotics are the beneficial bacteria that promote health, such as lactobacillus found in yogurt. Prebiotics are the good bacteria's nutritional sources which preserve the microbiota, thereby protecting its defense mechanisms.

In the beauty salon or spa, estheticians can recommend the use of products which have the function of promoting skin barrier integrity and the subsequent equilibrium of the microbiota. In this way, the constant use of these types of products will strengthen the skin, reducing cutaneous reactivity.

REMEDY

REMEDY: SOOTHING FORTIFYING DEFENSE

Introducing REMEDY, [comfort zone]'s professional and homecare solution to soothe and fortify sensitive and sensitized skins, targeting all the effects of excess inflammation. REMEDY's exclusive approach leverages the power of a prebiotic to promote skin health and to provide extra defense, natural botanical extracts to curb inflammation, blended with precious Marula Oil to repair the skin barrier. Redness is visibly reduced, a sensation of relief is immediately provided, the skin is stronger and more resilient to prevent future inflammation.

The new REMEDY is extremely gentle on the skin and on the environment, following our formulation philosophy SCIENCE-BASED CONSCIOUS FORMULAS™. It is free from silicones, parabens, mineral oils, added fragrances and surfactants. The products contain up to 98% of natural-origin ingredients, and have been dermatologically tested on sensitive skins.

ACTIVE INGREDIENTS

SOOTHING: MARVEL OF PERU AND MEXICAN HYSSOP BOTANICAL EXTRACTS

We need inflammation to combat infections to aid in tissue repair. But chronic inflammation—a perpetual alarm bell—breaks down cellular communication and function. Botanical extracts from the Mexican Hyssop plant, colloquially used for hypertension, contain flavonoids with anti-inflammatory activity to alleviate redness, vasodilation and skin temperature. This extract comes from fair trade cultivations in Mexico.

Extracts from another plant, Marvel of Peru, also aid in reducing uncomfortable sensations by modulating neurogenic inflammation signals.

FORTIFYING: MARULA OIL

Reinforcing the barrier is key to preventing further inflammation to the skin, Marula Oil, rich in oleic and other fatty acids, provides a biomimetic lipid profile to further protect the epidermal barrier and prevent TEWL.

DEFENSIVE: PREBIOTIC Alpha-Glucan Oligosaccharide is a prebiotic derived from a sugar molecule that helps to stabilize the ecosystem of skin during periods of stress or exposure to external aggressors, thus making it more resilient and keeping it in good health.

REMEDY

SCIENCE-BASED CONSCIOUS FORMULAS™

Silicones have been substituted with natural oils and butters, which provide silkiness, softness and “real active beauty” for the skin. Our products are made in Italy with electricity from renewable resources. REMEDY home care is composed of a cream to oil cleanser, a spray toner, a redness-control soothing serum, a soothing hydrating cream and a soothing nourishing barrier cream. A simple daily routine in a few steps, so that the skin is not stressed with too many products, and with specific textures that respect the natural skin structure and that do not occlude the pores.

PROFESSIONAL

The professional facial boasts an innovative peel-off oily mask to be mixed with the use of a shaker for an “express”, fresh facial. It is immediately refreshing, soothing and calming, without the need of a long massage to avoid any excessive stimulation.

FACE FLANNEL

The pair of face flannels ensure the removal of the cleanser and residues of the mask with delicate movements. One side of the flannel is fluffy biological cotton and the other side is in soft terry cloth cotton. The ideal accessory for skins which are sensitive, sensitized and prone to redness.

COMPOSITION: 100% organically certified cotton GOTS (Globally Organic Textile Standards), cotton from controlled organic cultivations which do not use pesticides, composts or whitening agents. Can be machine washed at 40°.

INTEGRATED APPROACH

REMEDY proposes an integrated approach which combines the use of home care products and professional treatments, with nutritional and lifestyle advice to combat chronic inflammation and help sensitive and sensitized skins get back to a healthy state, becoming more resilient against internal and external aggressors.

LIFESTYLE TIPS

To contrast skin sensitivity, it is strongly recommended to integrate cosmetics and treatments with specific habits which can reduce inflammation and reinforce the skin's natural defense.

BACK TO BASIC over-complicated skin care routines can be too aggressive for sensitive skin. Keep it simple with just specific soothing and replenishing products.

SAY NO TO SCRUBS AND DETERGENTS watch out for foaming cleansers, made of surfactants or products with alcohol and astringents, as they can strip the skin of its natural oils, leaving the barrier dry and susceptible to irritations.

AVOID TEMPERATURE SHOCK it can damage the external skin structure, causing widespread redness and irritation. Therefore, avoid extremely dry and hot closed environments, and be careful with freezing temperatures.

WEAR SUNSCREEN sun radiation is one of the triggers of inflammation. UV rays cause an increase in body temperature and an internal inflammatory state. Every day, protecting the skin barrier with a suitable SPF is fundamental.

Food too can cause internal pro-inflammation, which renders the skin more sensitive. It is therefore important to recognize pro-inflammation foods and choose those that instead promote an anti-inflammatory action.

OMEGA 3 FOODS Salmon, cold water fish (possibly not farmed), flaxseeds and walnuts are rich in omega 3s, helping to contrast inflammation and keep the skin barrier healthy.

PREBIOTICS Foods rich in fibre provide a high concentration of prebiotics that help keep the immune system active, and thus protect the skin from aggressions. Leek, onion, oat and apple are particularly rich in such substances.

SUPPLEMENT YOUR DIET Ceramides and Hyaluronic Acid supplements are highly recommended to maintain the optimal skin hydration level and protect the barrier function.

ALCOHOL

It should be avoided since it causes a localized vasodilation on the skin.

HOW IT WORKS

MARULA OIL Extract of the kernel of the Sclerocarya Birrea plant, with its origins in southern Africa, also known as "the elephants' tree" as the branches, leaves and fruits are their preferred food. HOW IT WORKS

MARVEL OF PERU The extract of this plant which originates in Peru, also known as the Marvel of Peru and "the four o'clock flower", has a soothing action, thanks to its anti-inflammatory properties which are essential for restoring comfort and equilibrium to sensitive skins. It acts with a double mechanism: calms inflammation, reducing the reactivity of the neuro-inflammatory receptors and therefore protecting the skin; and stimulates the synthesis of ceramides, essential elements of the skin barrier.

NATURAL-ORIGIN PREBIOTIC Alpha-Glucan Oligosaccharide is a prebiotic derived from natural sugars and has a defense action. A new and effective approach to the protection of sensitive skins. The oligosaccharide, working as a prebiotic, protects the integrity of the skin's natural flora, thereby reinforcing the microorganisms which cohabit the surface of the skin. Through this mechanism, the skin barrier's capacity is reinforced to resist the attack of harmful microorganisms, which are responsible for alterations in the skin, making it more sensitive.

HOW TO USE

Spray the product directly onto face and neck, or on to cotton pads, after cleansing and during the day as required. Leave to evaporate naturally. Do not spray directly into the eyes.

RECOMMENDED

For skins which are sensitive, sensitized and prone to redness. Ideal during sun exposure or during the day in closed environments subject to central heating and air conditioning, to provide relief, rehydrate and protect the skin.

GLOSSARY

Natural or synthetic substances which provoke allergic reaction.

The layer which covers the entire skin, also known as the acid mantle, is produced as a result of the sebaceous gland activity, perspiration and transepidermal water loss.

Persistent state of inflammation.

Inflammation triggered by irritating chemical substances which connect to the chemical receptors of the sensorial mucous fibers, leading to the secretion of P substances (inflammatory substances) and other mediators.

Natural derivative from the Magnolia tree with antibacterial properties and makes up part of the preservative system.

Extract of the kernel of the Sclerocarya Birrea plant, native to southern Africa and also known as the "elephant's tree" as it provides a major source of food for them. The fruit, oblong in shape and about the size of a plum, holds and protects the large nut with seeds rich in oil. The oil is rich in omega 9, tocopherols and phytosterols and strengthens the skin and preserves the barrier.

The extract of this plant, native to Peru, also known as "the four o'clock flower", has a soothing action, primarily calming inflammation whilst also stimulating the synthesis of ceramides to reinforce the skin barrier.

A Mexican medicinal plant traditionally used to calm the symptoms caused by shock and as a cosmetic extract has a soothing and anti-redness action. A remedy which contrasts the frenetic rhythms of modern life, responsible for stress which leads to vasodilation, itching and compromised skin barrier.

The ecological community of microorganisms which literally share our skin and body space. Contributes to the health of the skin.

Oligosaccharides, a fermented ingredient with potent prebiotic action which restores equilibrium to the skin's microflora, stimulating the skin's defense system.

Substances, typically non-digestible, that induce the growth or activity of microorganisms that positively influence the health of the skin or body.

Antimicrobial complex.
