FREE RADICALS AND OXIDATIVE DAMAGE

In every moment of our life, our body's cells produce FREE RADICALS, a natural consequence of the body's physiological processes such as breathing, digestion and cellular metabolism. Free radicals are "unstable" molecules characterized by the presence of an unpaired electron, which, in order to restore their balance, capture electrons from other structures, rendering them unstable and then reactive. This creates a chain reaction which is potentially harmful to the organism and defined as "OXIDATIVE DAMAGE".

To defend against the constant attack of free radicals and to preserve health and beauty, the skin, as the body, is equipped with endogenous antioxidant systems with defensive effects during the day and reparative actions during the night. The ENDOGENOUS ANTIOXIDANT DEFENSE systems are continually supported and rendered effective by the EXOGENOUS factors, such as diet. However, the passing of time and numerous daily activities (smoking, UV exposure, pollution and unbalanced diet) can aggravate the natural oxidative process, giving rise to an excessive production of free radicals. This means that it is essential to support the organism with an integrated approach, through antioxidant, reparative topical treatments combined with correct diet and lifestyle, to contrast oxidation and restore balance and health to the skin.

FOCUS ON

OXIDATIVE DAMAGE affects different structures:

- CELLULAR PHOSPHOLIPIDS: with consequent alterations of the membrane functioning
- NUCLEIC ACIDS: causing alterations of the DNA and RNA replication
- PROTEINS: with metabolic and structural alterations

ANTIOXIDANT DEFENSE AND REPAIR DAY AND NIGHT

The endogenous antioxidant systems have different effects during the day and night in order to respond effectively to the different needs of the skin. Recent discoveries reveal that the circadian rhythms, also referred to as the "biological clock" which responds to light, and is found within our central nervous system, is not only essential for one's mood, balance and physical energy, but also directly influences all the skin's functions. During the day when energy and blood circulation are involved in the most vital functions, the organism concentrates on defending itself against external aggressions and the oxidation caused by the internal metabolic processes. The body activates the defensive antioxidant enzymatic systems (Superoxide Dismutase (SOD), Glutathione (GSH) and others), which neutralize the free radicals to preserve health and beauty.

RENIGHT RECOVER TOUCH

During the night, when the body is at rest and repairing itself from the external aggressions, the epidermal cells have the energy to repair themselves from the oxidative damage suffered during the day, supported by the release of the melatonin hormone, known for its antioxidant properties. The skin is also more receptive to absorbing topical treatments thanks to accelerated blood flow which provides nutrients and oxygen. Recent scientific studies however reveal that during the night there is a peak of one of the oxidative phenomena: the LIPID PEROXIDATION, which is the deterioration or the oxidation of the lipid constituents of the cellular membranes. Compromising the integrity of the cellular membranes, the lipid peroxidation renders the skin more vulnerable and subject to precocious aging. It is also at night time that the TEWL (Transepidermal Water Loss) reaches its peak, resulting in dehydration.

FOCUS ON

LIPID PEROXIDATION
Oxidized lipids of the cellular membrane transform into harmful substances which get discarded and then accumulate in the extracellular matrix. In this same area, heavy metals also accumulate and react with the oxidized lipids thereby creating new free radicals. These new free radicals can then attack substances such as hyaluronic acid, elastin and collagen, thereby accelerating the aging process.

ANTIOXIDANTS

ANTIOXIDANTS are substances which are able to neutralize free radicals and protect the organism and the skin against their negative actions. There are many different antioxidant molecules which can intervene at different levels to contrast oxidation. The ENDOGENOUS antioxidant systems, predominantly of enzymatic action, are highly supported by the EXOGENOUS antioxidants, mainly in the form of nutrients and topic applications of cosmetic products. Vitamins are an example of exogenous antioxidants, especially CAROTENOIDS and VITAMIN E, which are highly lipophilic and active on stabilizing the membranes, along with some OLIGOELEMENTS such as selenium, manganese and zinc, which are essential for the functioning of the endogenous enzymatic defense mechanisms.

RENIGHT RECOVER TOUCH VITAMINIC ANTIOXIDANT NOURISHING

RENIGHT RECOVER TOUCH takes care of the skin offering extra support to the endogenous antioxidant mechanisms and skin repair. Through a vitamin cocktail of ingredients of natural origin, combined with a precious blend of deeply nourishing vegetal oils, RENIGHT RECOVER TOUCH acts globally on the antioxidant mechanisms but primarily on the lipid peroxidation, thereby protecting the cellular membranes and increasing the skin's defense.

HOME CARE

The RENIGHT homecare offer includes a nourishing, antioxidant night cream for all skins and can be combined with a rich, nourishing oil for skins which are particularly tired and depleted. To complete the night-time routine, a replenishing antioxidant mask for overnight repair.

ACTIVE INGREDIENTS VITAMINS and PRECIOUS OILS

The Goji is an evergreen plant from Tibet and is characterized by bright red berries, similar to small, oval-shaped, shriveled cherries with a slightly bitter taste. Over the last few years the Goji has been highly acclaimed thanks to its antioxidant richness enclosed within the berries. The CERTIFIED ORGANIC GOJI BERRY OIL, rich in vitamin E, betacarotene and oligoelements such as selenium, manganese and zinc, has been chosen as the hero ingredient of the RENIGHT RECOVER TOUCH line, together with the HYDROLYZED TOMATO EXTRACT, rich in lycopene, a notable carotenoid, and PURE VITAMIN E. Obtained from the extract of the tomato skin, lycopene has the properties of being sustainable and pure thanks to the bioliquefaction extraction process which avoids the use of damaging chemical solvents. The combination of precious oils complements and delivers the antioxidant actives, whilst providing the necessary nourishment for the skin. Macadamia nut oil in synergy with the oils of Babassu and Jojoba, offer sensorial textures, which, although nourishing, are not heavy and are therefore suitable to all skins.

THE FRAGRANCE

We always select distinctive yet non-invasive fragrances which recall the action of the product, using however minimal quantities so as to render our formulations pleasurable and safe.

A refined bouquet of the floral notes of violet and blackcurrant, enveloped and harmonized in a soft base of cedarwood, musk and vanilla. Bestows an immediate sensation of well-being and serenity for night-time rest.

INTEGRATED APPROACH

FORUMULATIVE PHILOSOPHY SCIENCE-BASED CONSCIOUS FORMULAS™

Oxidative damage responsible for the appearance of deep wrinkles, loss of elasticity and uneven skin tone is related to endogenous and exogenous causes. The signs of aging, besides compromising the skin's beauty, also indicates that the entire organism is compromised. It is therefore essential to have an integrated approach, combining the use of skincare as well as correct diet and lifestyle habits. Through the diet, vitamins, with powerful antioxidant actions, can strengthen and contribute to the endogenous defense system, which is under constant demand and therefore can be weak and not functioning optimally. RENIGHT RECOVER TOUCH proposes an integrated approach combining the use of homecare products for topical use, professional treatments and nutritional and lifestyle advice to promote a complete antioxidant action.

Cosmetic products nourish and feed the skin, and for this reason we pay great attention to what we put in our formulas. We select the best active ingredients of natural origin and advanced technology with regards to molecules and delivery systems. Every ingredient is consciously selected to guarantee efficacy, safety and sensoriality. The silicones have been substituted with natural oils and butters which guarantee silkiness and softness and "real active beauty" on the skin. Our products are created in Italy with electrical energy from renewable resources.

GLOSSARY

Substances able to neutralize free radicals hence protecting the organism and the skin against their negative actions.

Originating from a Brazilian palm tree, it is a clear light yellow oil with a high lipid content with excellent emollient properties.

A powerful antioxidant carotenoid which is a precursor to vitamin A (retinol) as well. It is a strongly colored red-orange pigment abundant in plants and fruits. The term "carotene", coined and discovered by the scientist Wackenroder, brings to mind "carrots", which in fact is very rich in carotene.

An innovative, highly sustainable, extraction process which avoids the use of damaging chemical solvents. Molecular cuts, provided by enzymes, help release the primary active ingredients required in a liquid state which can then be used in various forms, e.g. in cosmetic formulations.

A 24 hour cycle in which different physiological processes are regularly repeated and regulated by the central nervous system, and strongly influenced by the alternating of light and darkness.

Yellow, orange, and red pigments found in many vegetables and also in the tissues of animals which ingest vegetables. They are lipophilic and are involved in the protective mechanisms against lipid peroxidation. In nature approximately 600 different species can be found.

Free radicals are "unstable" molecules characterized by the presence of an unpaired electron, which, in order to restore their balance, capture electrons from other structures to restore the balance. This mechanism however gives rise to other unstable and reactive molecules. This creates a chain reaction which is potentially harmful to the organism, by damaging the cellular structures. This chain reaction is the oxidative stress.

Goji is an evergreen plant from Tibet and characterized by its bright red berries, similar to small, oval-shaped, shriveled cherries with a slightly bitter taste. Highly acclaimed for its antioxidant richness enclosed within the berries but also rich in vitamin E, betacarotene and oligoelements such as selenium, manganese and zinc.

The effect of free radicals on the cellular membrane results in oxidation and destruction of the lipids, which then transform into dangerous substances which get discarded and then accumulate in the extracellular matrix. Lipid peroxidation renders the cells very vulnerable.

A carotenoid found in different natural substances, and in particular extracted from the tomato skin, that has powerful antioxidant actions.
